3. Media Literacy for more democratic societies
4. Addressing and counteracting right-wing populism and racism
5. Where change-oriented adult education could take place?

- Each module provides a mix of live webinars/ podcasts/ videos, resources, forum discussions, and self-study
- The course took place in autumn 2020, but it is possible to participate and earn badges until the end of August 2021
- The webinars' recordings are available on the project website: <https://eaea.org/project/future-lab/?pid=13715>

Lessons learnt

- There is a lot of interest from trainers, providers, and organisations from all over Europe;
- The change-oriented approach has a potential for increasing participation of under-represented groups and contributing to fighting inequalities in our societies;
- The pandemic has made change-oriented adult education harder to implement, but more necessary as well;
- If the resources are limited or the curriculum is not flexible, trainers can start by applying change-oriented methods in their classes;
- Training opportunities and peer-to-peer exchanges on change-oriented education are needed to increase the capacity of AE professionals.
